The Year in Art

In a general survey of the field of art for the year 1921 certain events loom as not only memorable but indicative of real progress. Such, for example as the completion and dedication of the Harkness Memorial Quadrangle at Yale University. These buildings, designed by James Gamble Rogers in the Gothic style, are comparable in beauty to the great buildings of the world and are destined to exert a subtle and perhaps unsuspected influence upon the young men and boys who will attend this great University.

Owing to post-war conditions there has not been a great deal of building, despite the pressing need of houses and of structures of business and semi-public character. Most conspicuous in the division of architecture are two great competitions that were held during the summer of 1921, one for a State Capitol for Nebraska, the other for a great War Memorial for Kansas City. The first was won by Bertram Goodhue, of New York, the second by H. Van Buren Magonigle, of the same city. These competitions were adjudged by juries comprising the foremost architects of the country, and the winning designs have been declared of exceptional merit, as well as unique in character.

The Fifth Avenue Association in New York makes a custom of awarding two prizes annually for the best buildings architectually erected during the year. These prizes in 1921 went to the Textile Building, 299 Fifth Avenue, Sommerfield and Steckler, architects, and the New York Bible Society, 5 East 48th Street, W. E. Anthony, architect.

An exceedingly notable business building was added to New York's already large quota of such this year—the Cunard Building, at 25 Broadway, opened May 1st. The architect of the building was Benjamin Wister Morris. A special feature of the interior is the decoration of the Great Hall, planned by Ezra Winter and executed under his direction by a group of co-operating artists. The series of pendentive paintings and rondels are by Winter. The pendentives, representing the ships of the great explorers: Ericson, Columbus, Cabot, and Drake, are executed in "fresco secco", which process eliminates the possibility of unpleasant reflections of light. Striking features of the walls are maps painted in rich decorative colors by Barry Faulkner. A bronze ring in low relief and two inserts in the niches were modelled by John Gregory. Mr. Winter, Mr. Faulkner, and Mr. Gregory are all Fellowship men of the American Academy in Rome.

In the State Capitol of Missouri a series of mural paintings illustrative of American history and the history of Missouri, by the following artists have been completed: Oscar E. Berninghaus, Nathan C. Wyeth, Adolph Blondheim, Richard E. Miller, Frank Brangwyn, Henry Reuterdahl, Charles Hofbauer, and Frederic Carpenter.

A series of mural decorations, paintings and sculptural work in low relief by John S. Sargent in the rotunda of the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, commissioned in 1916, was completed and unveiled, with appropriate ceremonies in November.

A painting by William Woodward for the ceiling of the United Fruit Company's building in New Orleans, deserves special mention in this category.

During the summer of 1921 a National Gallery Commission was formed to promote the development and assist in the administration of the National Gallery of Art, at Washington. This commission, appointed by the Regents of the Smithsonian Institution, consists of five public men interested in art, five experts, five artists and the secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, Mr.

Charles D. Walcott, ex-officio. The five public men are W. K. Bixby, president of the St. Louis Art Museum; Joseph H. Gest, director of the Cincinnati Art Museum; Charles Moore, chairman of the Commission of Fine Arts; James Parmalee, of Cleveland and Washington, and Herbert L. Pratt, of New York, secretary of the National Art Committee. The five experts are John E. Lodge, of Boston, director of the Freer Gallery; Frank Jewett Mather, Jr., Marquand Professor of Art at Princeton University; Charles A. Platt, of New York, architect; Edward W. Redfield, well-known landscape painter of Center Bridge, Pa., and Denman W. Ross, of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts and Harvard University. The artists are Herbert Adams, sculptor; E. H. Blashfield, painter; Daniel Chester French, sculptor; William H. Holmes, painter and director of the National Gallery of Art, and Gari Melchers, painter.

A notable series of portraits of Leaders of the Allied Countries, in the Great War, commissioned by a National Art Committee (Hon. Henry White, Chairman, and Herbert D. Pratt, Secretary), and proposed as a nucleus for a great National Portrait Gallery in Washington, had first showing in the Metropolitan Museum of Art in January, 1921. The collection, which comprises twenty portraits, later went on tour of the leading museums under the auspices of the American Federation of Arts.

The Phillips Memorial Gallery, Washington, D. C., founded in 1920 by Mrs. Duncan C. Phillips and her son, Duncan Phillips, and organized by the latter as a memorial to his father, Major Duncan C. Phillips, and his brother, Mr. James Laughlin Phillips, has been established, and the collection, comprising chiefly paintings by American artists, temporarily set forth in a small gallery erected for the purpose at 1606 21st Street, adjacent to the Phillips' residence.

In the Library of Congress at Washington, in May, the collection of Whistleriana assembled, during Whistler's lifetime and since his death, with utmost care and untiring devotion, by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Pennell, and by them presented to the Nation, was formally placed on exhibition. A vote in appreciation of the collection and of Mr. and Mrs. Pennell's generosity was unanimously given by the Convention of the American Federation of Arts at its annual meeting, May 18-21, 1921.

At Lyme, Connecticut, was erected and formally opened during the summer of 1921 a small gallery, specially intended for summer exhibitors, designed by Charles A. Platt and admirably adapted for its purpose.

In Provincetown, Massachusetts, an old residence was secured and remodeled as an exhibition gallery. The first exhibition was held therein in August.

An association was formed of southern art organizations, in the early part of 1921, and under its auspices an All-Southern Exhibition of high standard of paintings and sculpture by southern artists was held in the Gibbes Memorial Building, at Charleston, S. C., in March.

The Boston Museum of Fine Arts this year abolished all entrance fees, making admission to the Museum free to the public at all times. A number of the Western museums, while continuing the custom of charging visitors a small fee upon certain days, agreed to exchange courtesies in the way of admitting each other's members without charge, upon the presentation of membership cards.

A notable exhibition of British Arts and Crafts was brought to the United States and circulated during 1921 under the auspices of the Detroit Society of Arts and Crafts.

Likewise in the spirit of international friendliness an exhibition of Swiss art, assembled under the patronage of the Swiss Government, was brought to this country and circulated by the Brooklyn Museum.

The University of Pennsylvania formally established this year a School of Fine Arts, with Professor Warren P. Laird at its head.

The American Academy in Rome added to its school of classical studies and its fellowships in painting, sculpture, architecture, and landscape architecture, a department of music, thus opening its doors to musicians. Mr. Felix Lamond was appointed first head of this department.

Among the notable works in sculpture completed and permanently placed during the year 1921, mention should be made of the following:

Equestrian statue of Stonewall Jackson, by Charles Keck. Unveiled at Charlottesville, Virginia, October 19th, 1921. Gift of Paul Goodloe McIntire.

Monument of George Rogers Clark, by Robert Aitken. Unveiled at Charlottesville, Virginia, November 3, 1921. Also the gift of Paul Goodloe McIntire.

Bronze Equestrian Statue of General Simon Bolivar, the South American liberator, by Sallie James Farnham, unveiled in Central Park, New York. April 19, 1921. Gift of the Government and people of Venezuela.

War Memorial, Exedra and group of two figures by Augustus Lukeman, Grand Concourse, Brooklyn. Unveiled in June.

War Memorial, Exedra and Figure of a victorious soldier waving an overseas cap, by Augustus Lukeman, Red Hook Park, Brooklyn.

Statue of Benjamin Franklin, by Paul Bartlett, erected at Waterbury, Conn., after being conveyed by dray from Baltimore where it was cast, and stopping in several cities en route.

Statue of Lafayette, by Daniel Chester French, erected at Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.

Statue of Edgar Allan Poe, by Moses Ezekiel. Erected and unveiled at Baltimore, Md., October 20, 1921.

Statue of General Russell A. Alger, by Daniel Chester French, Grand Central Park, Detroit, Mich.

Statue by Henry M. Shrady, in honor of General Alpheus Williams, placed on Belle Isle, Detroit.

Statue of Massasoit, by Cyrus E. Dallin, erected on Cole's Hill, Plymouth, Mass.

Pilgrim Maiden, statue, by Henry W. Kitson. Erected at Plymouth, Mass., at the time of the Tercentenary Celebration.

St. Luke's Battle Cloister, with statue of a doughboy, by Emil Zettler, Evanston, Ill.

Indian fountain figure by A. Phimister Proctor, presented to the State Reservation at Saratoga Springs by Conservation Commissioner Pratt.

Portrait of Joseph Hodges Choate, by Herbert Adams, Union League Club, New York, N. Y.

Bas-relief of Dante, by F. E. Triebel, commemorating the Sexcentenary of Dante's death.

Medal by John Flanagan commemorating the presentation of the Statue of Lafayette to the city of Metz, by the Knights of Columbus.

Medal by John Flanagan given by the United States to the city of Verdun in appreciation of the valor of its defenders.

Medal by Robert Aitken, commemorating visit of Marshal Foch to the United States.

Replicas of the statue of Joan of Arc by Anna Vaughan Hyatt, erected some years ago on Riverside Drive, New York, have been erected in Gloucester, Mass., as a War Memorial, and in Blois, France.

There is evidence of a steady increase in the interest in music in the museums, and an inclination to relate music to the arts of painting, sculpture and design. In the Boston Museum of Fine Arts during the early part of 1921 three free symphony orchestral concerts were given. At the Metropolitan Museum in New York during the same season the orchestral concerts under the leadership of David Mannes, through the munificence of music lovers and Museum members were given and were even more largely attended than before.

The Cleveland Museum of Art, under the auspices of its Music Department which is particularly active, has installed a large pipe organ with chimes, above the garden court, which will be used in connection with its extended music program.

A new wing of the Metropolitan Museum was completed in the Spring of 1921 and its opening was inaugurated by an exhibition of Architecture and the Allied Arts, held under the auspices of the Architectural League of New York.

There was an evident increase in interest in the art of pageantry. Notable pageants were held in several parts of the country, but most notable of all was that given at Plymouth in July and August for the celebration of the Tercentenary of the Landing of the Pilgrims. This pageant was written by George Pierce Baker of Harvard, who called to his assistance a number of poets, among whom may be mentioned Edwin Arlington Robinson, Josephine Preston Peabody, and Robert Frost; and musicians such as Edward Burlingame Hill, Edgar Stillman Kelley, Frederick S. Converse, George W. Chadwick, Arthur Foote, Henry F. Gilbert, Chalmers Clifton, Leo Sowerby, and John Powell. The costumes were designed by Rollo Peters, the well-known California painter. It was an interesting piece of coöperation on the part of the several representatives of the arts.

At auction sales some notable prices were attained in 1921. Most sensational of all was the purchase abroad by Messrs. Duveen, of Gainsborough's "Blue Boy" and Sir Joshua Reynolds' portrait of "Mrs. Siddons as the Tragic Muse", from the Duke of Westminster's collection, at a price said to approximate one million dollars, one hundred and seventy thousand pounds being paid for the former which has since been acquired by Mr. Henry E. Huntington of California and New York.

Philadelphia has received through the bequest of an art-loving, public-spirited citizen another collection of paintings of extraordinary value and interest. According to the will of John H. McFadden, who died in February, 1921, his magnificent collection of eighteenth century English art has been left in trust to the city of Philadelphia. The will provides that $7,500 annually shall be set aside for the maintenance of the collection; the only stipulation being that the Municipal Art Museum to house the paintings be completed within seven years after Mr. McFadden's death. Should the city fail to meet this requirement, the pictures go to the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York.

The State University of New York has established in its Gould Memorial Library an Artists' Memorial. Therein have already been placed busts of George Inness, Clinton Ogilvie, and Carroll Beckwith. As a memorial to Stanford White who designed the building, a pair of bronze doors, the work of his son, will be placed at the main entrance to the Library.

NATIONAL GALLERY OF ART

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION

Washington

Officers of the Institution

WARREN G. HARDING, President of the United States, Presiding Officer ex-officio.
CALVIN COOLIDGE, Vice-Pres. of the United States, Chancellor.
CHARLES D. WALCOTT, Secretary and Keeper, ex-officio.
WILLIAM H. HOLMES, Director, National Gallery of Art.

For foundation and history see Vol. XI, p. 76.

Open free to the public every week day from 9 A.M. to 4.30 P.M.; Sundays from 1.30 to 4.30 P.M.

The Institution was founded in 1846, art being one of the four grand divisions included in the scope of its contemplated activities. The separate title "National Gallery of Art" for the art collections was first applied in 1906 as the result of a decision handed down by the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia.

The collections, cared for previously in connection with the collections of the department of anthropology, increased to such an extent in recent years that it became necessary to separate the Gallery from the scientific department, and on July 1, 1920, it was made a separate unit under the Institution, with W. H. Holmes as director. The problems of the Gallery made it necessary to organize a commission to consider plans for their solution, and especially to take up the task of providing a gallery building. The membership of the Commission is as follows:

Public men interested in the Fine Arts:

W. K. BIXBY, St. Louis, Mo.
JOSEPH H. GEST, Cincinnati, O.
JAMES PARMELEE, Cleveland, O.
HERBERT L. PRATT, New York, N. Y.
CHARLES MOORE, Detroit, Mich.

Experts:

JOHN E. LODGE, Boston, Mass.
FRANK JEWETT MATHER, JR., Princeton, N. J.
CHARLES A. PLATT, New York, N. Y.
EDWARD WILLIS REDFIELD, Center Bridge, Pa.

Artists:

HERBERT ADAMS, New York, N. Y.
EDWIN H. BLASHFIELD, New York, N. Y.
DANIEL C. FRENCH, New York, N. Y.
WILLIAM H. HOLMES, Washington, D. C.
GARI MELCHERS, Falmouth, Va.

At the first meeting of the Commission the following committees were appointed:

In May, 1921, twenty portraits of personages prominent in the war with Germany, executed for the National Portrait Committee by American portrait painters of established reputation, was exhibited in the central room of the Gallery.

The Freer Gallery of Art is regarded as a separate unit of the National Gallery, to remain always as such, the staff being provided for by the Freer Foundation. The collections at the beginning of the fiscal year are in process of installation, with John E. Lodge as curator, and Katharine N. Rhoades and Grace D. Guest, assistants.

The National Gallery proper occupies the main central sky-light hall of the Natural History Museum, and will so continue until an art building is provided. Its collections consist of gifts and bequests by generous patrons and of transfers from other Government departments. The more important collections are: The Harriet Lane Johnston Bequest, comprising 21 works, among which are paintings by Luini, Romney, Reynolds, Lawrence, Hoppner, Constable, Beechey, Gordon, Jansen, Pourbus and Rossiter; the William T. Evans collection of 151 paintings by 106 contemporary American artists, besides numerous engravings; 82 paintings and drawings by contemporary French artists, presented by the French Government in recognition of the aid given to France in the war with Germany; 24 important works by 19 European masters, Cox, Flinck, Francia, Gainsborough, Guardi, Hogarth, Lotto, Lawrence, Maes, Mainardi, Raeburn, Rembrandt, Reynolds, Romney, Rubens, Turner, Titian, Van Orley, Wilson; a large collection of miscellaneous art objects chiefly French, the gift of Reverend Alfred Duane Pell. Five hundred and ninety paintings and drawings illustrating the war with Germany are on exhibition in available spaces on the ground floor of the Museum building, ninety-three being from the great series of paintings and sketches made for the Liberty Loan celebration in New York, and four hundred and ninety-seven the work of the corps of artists sent to France for the purpose by the War Department. The additions for the year 1920-1921 include as gifts nine works of painting and sculpture, one bequest, and twenty-six loans.

The collections of the Museum cover the painting, sculpture and derivative arts of all times and countries. The collection of oriental art is the most important in the world under one roof; and with the library of books in Chinese and Japanese, and other facilities, offers an unexampled opportunity for the study of oriental culture. The collection of classical art is the foremost in America. The Egyptian Department has a unique collection of Old Empire sculpture. The Print Department offers the best opportunity in America to study the history of the engraver's art.

The Library contains 21,688 volumes, and the Photograph Collection 54,893 prints. The Photograph Department lends prints to schools, clubs and classes in the immediate vicinity of Boston.

The Museum issues a bi-monthly Bulletin and Annual Report and Handbook of the Museum, and a special catalogue. A Leaflet Guide is issued in vest-pocket size giving directions for reaching all the departments and containing a manifolded Insert with a plan of the galleries, bringing the information of the Guide to the day of sale.

accomplishments of its objects; shall build, operate, and maintain suitable buildings for works of art and auditorium purposes, to be known as the Detroit Institute of Arts; shall acquire, collect, own and exhibit objects of art, such as are usually acquired by museums of art, and shall have such other powers and duties as may be necessary for the proper discharge of its duties.

Under the provisions of this charter, the corporation of the Detroit Museum of Art conveyed to the Arts Commission all its property and collections, to be administered by the Municipal Arts Commission, and hereafter to be designated as the Detroit Institute of Arts. Meetings of the Arts Commission are held every Monday afternoon. Annual meeting in June. Income for maintenance is $59,000; for purchase of collections, $50,000; toward erection of a new building, $260,000. Additional funds for purchase are held in trust by the Detroit Museum of Art.

The collections include: an Egyptian Department, a Classical Department, Print Department, Department of Oriental Art, a Colonial Department, collection of paintings of the fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, as well as modern paintings, and a Children's Museum, consisting of material suitable for circulation in the public schools, and of particular interest to children.

The educational work of the Museum is wide in its scope. There are Sunday afternoon talks in the auditorium, together with musical programs; the Society of Arts and Crafts, the Archæological Society, the Michigan Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, and other societies, hold their lecture courses jointly with the Museum. Lantern slides, photographs, and objects from the collections are available for the use of schools and study clubs. A branch of the Detroit Public Library, in charge of Miss Isabel Weadock, fulfills an important sphere of usefulness. A bulletin is published monthly from October to May. Free sketch classes under the direction of an instructor from the Recreation Commission are held Friday evenings and Saturday mornings. During 1920-21, through the co-operation of the Chamber Music Society, free concerts were given in the Institute Auditorium each Sunday afternoon during the season.

In connection with the Detroit Institute of Arts is the Museum of Art Founders Society, which donates purchases of art objects to the Detroit Institute of Arts. Annual dues are from $10 to $10,000; when the contributions of a member reach a sum total of $1,000 in money or property he or she becomes a governing member of the Corporation. The 1920-21 gifts to the Institute by the Founders Society were: "Child with an Orange," by Gari Melchers; "Woman Sewing," by William Paxton; "A Corner of My Studio," by William Auerbach Levy; "Desert Series" of 35 etchings, by George Elbert Burr.

Acquisitions, 1920-21: "Fish," by William M. Chase; "Home Fields," by John S. Sargent; "The Blue Symphony," by J. J. Enneking; "Woman Sewing," by William M. Attendance for the year ending April 1, 1921, was 258,943.

The permanent collections include paintings, sculpture, prints and extensive groups of objects illustrative of the decorative arts. American paintings have received special attention, but foreign schools, particularly the modern French impressionists are represented, and there is a small group of paintings by artists who lived prior to the XIX Century. The print collection contains examples representative of almost every period in the development of the graphic arts. The sculpture collection embraces numerous examples in bronze, marble and plaster by American and European artists. A collection of French furniture and woodwork has been assembled which illustrates the development of the craft in France from the early XVI Century until the period of Louis XVI. English furniture is represented by examples of all the important types of the XVIII Century. There is an extensive collection of textiles embracing Gothic and Renaissance tapestries, Gothic velvets, embroidered vestments and laces. The Chinese department contains ceramics, bronzes and jades of most of the historic periods, as well as paintings, textiles, Buddhist sculpture, carved stones, glass, enamel and lacquer. Japanese art is represented by color prints, lacquer, armor, arms and other metal work, textiles, sculptures and carvings. There are also collections of Corean ceramics; Egyptian antiquities; Greek marble sculpture, vases and other objects; Graeco-Roman glass; Persian textiles, metal work and ceramics; and casts of Greek, Roman and Renaissance sculpture.

The educational work of the Museum includes; a course of lectures on paintings; a course of lectures on household and decorative arts; a classroom with lantern for teachers and pupils, where the work is conducted with the co-operation of art schools, colleges, high schools, elementary public schools, private schools, civic societies, women's clubs and the general public. The Museum lends exhibits to the Public Library, the high school, Teachers' College and grade schools. Facilities are offered students and copyists. A quarterly bulletin dealing with the activities of the Museum and special exhibition catalogues are published. Photographs and photogravures of paintings and sculpture in the collections are on sale.

25 cents a person, with minimum charge of $1 an hour, except for members and Public School teachers and pupils to whom this service is free.

Photographic copies of all objects belonging to the Museum (not only paintings, but the objects in every collection) are made by the Museum photographer and by several firms. Prices range from postals two for five cents to large colored prints at $10. The publications in print number over sixty and include catalogues of the various departments, handbooks of special exhibitions, and a history of the Museum; a monthly Bulletin is issued, which is sent free to members, to others $2 a year and 20 cents a number; a quarterly Children's Bulletin is issued at $1 a year, 25 cents a number.

Incorporated 1870. Board meetings, February, April, June, October and December. Dues, annual members, $10; sustaining, $25; fellowship, $100; contributing, $250; total membership Dec. 31, 1920, was 9,371.

Collections include the fine arts—painting, sculpture and architecture—as well as what are usually called decorative or industrial arts. Ancient art includes Egyptian, Babylonian, Assyrian, Phoœnician, Cypriote, Etruscan, Greek and Roman antiquities. In painting the attempt is made to illustrate the history of the art from the Middle Ages to the present time, with especial attention to the work of American artists. The decorative arts include woodwork, metalwork, ceramics and textiles. The collections represent the East and the Near East (China, Japan, Persia and Asia Minor), Europe and America. Special attention is given to American art.

Broadly speaking, the first floor of the Museum is filled with the Egyptian and classical collections, the casts, arms and armor, musical instruments and modern sculpture; the second floor with the art of the East and Near East, textiles, laces, paintings, including the Altman collection, and prints. The Pierpont Morgan collection of European decorative arts, chronologically arranged—the Merovingian period to the nineteenth century—occupies a wing by itself. The Library and Photograph Departments occupy a separate wing. A guide to the collections, sold at 10 cents, points out the most interesting or important objects in the different galleries.

The most important event in the history of the Museum during 1920 was the celebration of the completion of a half-century of growth by formal exercises with addresses and the unveiling of tablets commemorative of the founders and the benefactors of the Museum, and by a loan exhibition of objects of the highest merit belonging to the most distinguished collections of the city. The attendance was the largest of any year except 1909, when the Hudson-Fulton celebration brought large crowds to the city; and the attendance of those who came to the Museum for instruction the largest of any year without exception. The most important additions to the collections of the Museum, either acquired or first exhibited during the year, were the following: two bequests of great value and interest, one an extensive collection of objects of Near Eastern art from William Milne Grinnell, the other, ten important paintings and two unique pieces of French furniture from William K. Vanderbilt; a remarkable Egyptian "find" of painted wooden funerary models disclosed at Thebes in the tomb of Mehenkwetre, a dignitary of about 2000 B. C.; important examples of French eighteenth century woodwork—a shop-front and a paneled room—the gift of J. Pierpont Morgan; a large pottery Lohan of the T'ang period; two complete suits of horse armor, richly etched, and originally parcel gilt, from a castle of the Princes Collalto; the gift from William E. Baillie of his collection of approximately 25,000 bookplates, believed to be the most important collection of its kind ever made by a private person in America; and the loan from Ogden Codman for an indefinite period of his large and important collection of prints and illustrated books about architecture and interior decoration.

The total number of visitors was 926,908. The cost of operating the Museum was $797,646.84; the amount available for the payment of this expense—city appropriation ($312,648.29), income from endowment funds, admission fees, sales of handbooks, etc.—was $524,120.02, leaving a deficit of $273,526.82. Acquisitions of the year numbered 11,824, of which 290 were received by bequest, 3,881 by gift and 7,653 by purchase.

The use of the Museum by special classes is shown in the following table:

Artists and Designers:	1919	1920
Working in Galleries	12,702	14,742
Working in Study Rooms	716	1,120

During the season of 1920-21 the educational work included free public lectures on Saturday and Sunday afternoons from November to March; story hours for the children of members weekly during the same period; another course of story hours from October to April for all children; a special course of gallery conferences on Northern Art in the XV and XVI Centuries for members and others; weekly lectures throughout the school year, correlating with the school curriculum, for teachers and pupils in the high schools of the city; four courses of study hours for practical workers—designers, buyers and salespeople; six lectures for the deaf, three lectures for the blind, and two for crippled children in the public schools. To a greater extent than before the Museum co-operated with the public schools, meeting classes in the Museum and giving lectures in both high and elementary schools. The plan of co-operation between the New York Training School for Teachers and the Vocational School for Boys and the Museum, was continued, including illustrated talks in the school and classroom meetings; 55,852 objects—lantern slides, photographs, casts and textiles in the lending collection—were lent for use outside the Museum in many places east of the Mississippi River; 38,392 people—students, designers and manufacturers—worked in the galleries, study rooms and library; and 41,630 children came in classes from the schools.

Educational work in the Museum was conducted by many outsiders, among them Barnard College, Teachers College, Columbia and New York Universities, Hunter College, Packer Institute, Cooper Union, and Pratt Institute, the School Art League and various art schools.

Eight free orchestral concerts were given in the main entrance hall on the Saturday evenings of January and March by a symphony orchestra under the conductorship of David Mannes to audiences aggregating 43,628. The cost of these public concerts was a contribution from several public-spirted friends of the Museum.

Established 1919. The purpose of the institution, which provides an attractive place of residence and convenient working facilities, is to bring together a group of artists and craftsmen of ability and technical training who will work out their own particular problems, assisting one another by their various points of view. The artists who enter the Foundation are encouraged to devote themselves to the study of nature and every variety of natural growth. The Foundation maintains a museum, which is open to the public on one afternoon of each month. The art collections contain objects of sculpture, painting and industrial arts. The collections are especially rich in examples of oriental art. (See school section).

their families, students and children; those under 7 years must be accompanied by an adult.

Incorporated 1913. Museum building opened 1916. Annual meeting second Monday in November; board meetings monthly. Annual dues, $10; sustaining, $25; life, $100. Membership, about 5,000. Bulletin published ten times a year.

Permanent collections include tapestries and armor; classical art; sculpture and iron work in Garden Court; prints; Italian Renaissance paintings; early American paintings; modern paintings of all schools; Egyptian, Japanese, Chinese and Near Eastern art; textiles and handicrafts. The collections especially emphasize Colonial art, armor, Oriental art, and early Italian paintings. Three galleries are reserved for temporary exhibitions.

There is a reference library of works on art, with current art magazines; open week days from 9 A.M to 5 P.M. During lecture season is open on Sunday from 3 to 6 P.M., and on Wednesday until 8 P.M.

The educational work covers a broad field. Lectures are given, on the average, two or three times a week during the season. Children's entertainments are given on Saturday afternoons and interpretative talks on Sunday afternoons. Clubs and conventions are invited to the Museum. Docent service free. About four classes of the public school children of the seventh and eighth grades come each day for study and instruction under the supervisor of drawing stationed at the Museum by the school board, and there are special classes for talented students from these classes. In addition there are frequent visits from public and private school classes. Extension exhibits are maintained in the Branch Libraries of the city each month.

During the season of 1920-21, lecture courses were given on "Oriental Art" and "Some Phases of American Art," by specialists in those fields. "The Appreciation of Chamber Music," by Thomas Whitney Surette, illustrated by members of the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra; "Landscape Architecture," by seven experts on that subject; "Great Masters of Painting Represented in the Museum Collections," by Henry Turner Bailey, and a number of lectures on miscellaneous subjects. Two accredited courses were given for college students on "The Appreciation of Beauty," by Henry Turner Bailey, and "The Appreciation of Music," by Thomas Whitney Surette and Walter S. Pope.

The Department of Musical Arts aims to create a correct appreciation for good music. Interpretative pictures are given which are illustrated by artists of recognized ability; periods of singing are held in the lecture hall on Sunday afternoons; classes in singing are arranged for members' children on Saturday mornings and short periods of singing are given the public school children who come to the Museum. A memorial endowment of $250,000 has made possible a considerable development of this work and an order has been placed for a pipe organ which will be installed above the Garden Court.

Important accessions, 1920-21: "La Sortie du Bain," by Mary Cassatt; "Mrs. Collyear," by Sir Joshua Reynolds; "Les Bergers," by Rene Menard; "Mrs. Mason," by Gilbert Stuart; marble relief by Bartollomeo Ballano; walnut settee and armchair, English, XVIII Century; two pieces XV Century stained glass; complete set, in duplicate, of French Government war medals; about 500 pieces of lace; about 550 etchings and other prints; about 100 Japanese prints; 134 pieces Japanese pottery and Chinese porcelain; collection of Peruvian pottery; collection of Chinese jade and porcelain; Japanese enamel, pottery and metal work; collection of Korean pottery; collection of North American Indian blankets; collection of miscellaneous Japanese items.

The Print Club of Cleveland was organized in 1920 for the purpose of acquiring "prints for the Cleveland Museum of Art, with the object of aiding in the growth of a Print Department for the Museum, to stimulate an interest in and an appreciation for prints in the community, and to promote education

Galleries open free, daily, 10 A.M. to 10 P.M.; Sundays, 2 to 6 P.M. The permanent collection contains modern paintings, drawings and prints; bronzes; sculpture in marble; and casts of classic and modern sculpture and of architecture.

Founded 1896. The Carnegie Institute is now composed of the Department of Fine Arts, the Museum, the Library and the Carnegie Institute of Technology. The Department of Fine Arts, the Museum, the Library and the Carnegie Husic Hall occupy the same building. Endowment fund for the Department of Fine Arts gives an annual income of $100,000.

Annual International Exhibitions of Paintings are held each spring, and other special exhibitions are presented throughout the year. The Institute maintains a Children's Museum of Art for exhibitions, lectures, and other activities of interest to children; courses of lectures for adults are also presented.

There is regular co-operation between the public school system of Pittsburgh and the Carnegie Institute, whereby the eighth grades of the public schools, comprising about 5,000 children, are sent for three afternoons each year to the Institute for instruction. The school board voted the necessary funds for the payment of carfares and the Superintendent of Schools has made this instruction a part of the required work. During 1920-21 about 1,500 children from the parochial schools and about 1,000 children from schools in nearby towns also came three times for this instruction, which is always given by a museum instructor. Three lessons on the appreciation of art, one on painting, one on sculpture and the third on architecture, have been prepared for use in this work. These lessons have been published by the Department of Fine Arts of Carnegie Institute.

Guidance in the galleries is free to all visitors. A School of Design is maintained as part of the Carnegie Institute of Technology (see school section).

Associations and Societies

(NOT INCLUDING MUSEUMS WHICH ARE GIVEN IN SEPARATE SECTION. SEE PAGES 13-76)

NOTE.—Each organization is listed under the city where the office is located. State societies are entered immediately following the State heading and precede the cities in each State.

Federations and national societies without permanent headquarters form the first group and are entered before the States. A full index with cross references will be found at the end of the book.

The Greek cross (✠) preceding the name of an organization indicates that it is a Chapter of The American Federation of Arts.

Editorial Office, 1741 New York Ave., Washington, D. C.

Organized 1909. Incorporated 1916. The membership is made up of both individuals and organizations, the latter styled Chapters. Annual dues of chapters $10; Associate members $3 (receive "The American Magazine of Art"); Active members $10 (have the privilege of voting, receive "The American Magazine of Art," and other publications distributable to members); Contributing members $100 a year. There are 277 chapters, 799 active members, 2,161 associate members.

The Twelfth Annual Convention of the American Federation of Arts was held in Washington, D. C., May 18th, 19th and 20th, 1921. Over two hundred delegates were in attendance. Five of the six sessions were held in the auditorium of the Corcoran Gallery of Art. The exception was the afternoon session on the first day, which was held in the auditorium of the National Museum.

Colonel C. O. Sherrill, Secretary of the National Commission of Fine Arts, made the address of welcome and directed attention to the plan for the artistic development of Washington drawn up by the Burnham Park Commission, urging those interested in art throughout the country to exert their influence to induce its realization. The address of the President, Mr. Robert W. de Forest, dealt chiefly with the possible danger of a tariff being placed on art in the revision of the tariff laws, and called on Mr. John Quinn, of New York, to amplify the subject. The Secretary, the Treasurer, the Extension Secretary and Professor Paul H. Grummann, in charge of the Federation's Western office, presented reports.

The afternoon session on May 18th opened with a demonstration by Mr. Ross Crane of the Better Homes Institute, of the Art Institute of Chicago. Mr. L. M. Churbuck, Director of Art of the Brockton, Massachusetts, Fair, spoke on "Art in State Fairs"; Miss Mary Powell, head of the Art Department of the St. Louis Public Library, on "Art in the Public Library"; Mr. Allen Eaton on "Art in the Schools"; and Mr. John F. Braun, President of the Philadelphia Art Alliance, on "The Alliance of the Arts."

The morning session on the 19th had as a general topic, "The Artist's Point of View," with addresses by Mr. Herbert Adams, on "Sculpture," Mr. J. Monroe Hewlett, on "Mural Painting," Mr. George Harding, on "Illustration," Mr. John Taylor Arms, on "Etching and the Graphic Arts," and Mr. Albert Kelsey on "Architecture." The general topic of the afternoon session of that day was Professional Art Problems and there was general discussion of the following sub-topics: Prizes—Do They Stimulate Art?; How to Promote the Sale of Works by American Artists? The Handicrafts—How They Can be Encouraged? At this session, by special request Mrs. Whitford gave a brief talk on "Art for the Farmer's Wife."

On May 20th at the morning session the program was as follows: "The Art Education We Need," by Leon Loyal Winslow, of the University of the State of New York; "School of Illustration and Commercial Art for Disabled Soldiers, by W. A. Rogers, director of the school; "The American Academy in Rome," by Charles D. Norton; "The Tiffany Foundation," by Stanley Lothrop, Director; "The Peterborough Colony," by Mrs. Edward MacDowell, Director.

A special feature of the afternoon, and closing session on the 20th was an illustration of "Methods of Appreciation of Music," by Mr. Thomas Whitney Surette, of Concord, Massachusetts, Director of Music at the Cleveland Art Museum, illustrated by Brahms Quartet for violin, viola, violoncello and piano, and by Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe and members of the National String Quartet. At this session Mr. Rossiter Howard of the Cleveland Museum spoke on "Educational Work of an Art Museum." Mr. William Laurel Harris spoke on the "Art Center Incorporated, of New York—Its Objects and Aims." Certain resolutions were passed, dealing with art education, the tariff laws, and the advancement of the handicrafts. The annual election took place.

A reception was given in honor of the delegates on the afternoon of May 18th in the National Gallery of Art, where a collection of War Portraits by eminent American artists was then on view. In the Corcoran Gallery of Art the exhibition of British Arts and Crafts was set forth for the special benefit of the delegates to the Convention, through the courtesy of the Washington Society of the Fine Arts.

On the 19th the delegates were received at the White House by the President at noon and by Mrs. Harding in the afternoon. That evening the Pennell Collection of Whistleriana was opened with a private view to the delegates in the Library of Congress. Opportunity was given the delegates to visit the Phillips Memorial Gallery on the afternoon of the 20th, and that evening the convention was concluded with the usual dinner at Rauscher's. Over three hundred were in attendance. Mr. de Forest presided, and the speakers were Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director of the Pan-American Union, Mr. Cass Gilbert, Miss Violet Oakley and Mr. David Mannes.

The regular work of the American Federation of Arts is chiefly along four lines. It sends out traveling exhibitions; circulates illustrated lectures and portfolios of prints; publishes "The American Magazine of Art," an illustrated monthly magazine, and "The American Art Annual," a standard book of reference for art in the United States.

The Federation maintains a branch office at Lincoln, Neb., and is represented on the Pacific Coast by Pedro J. Lemos, Stanford University, Calif.

During the year 1920-21 The American Federation of Arts sent out 50 collections for which there were 214 engagements. A complete list of the last season's exhibitions is given below. The Federation now has thirty-six illustrated lectures which are sent to places where authoritative lecturers cannot be secured.

WHO'S WHO IN ART

ELEVENTH ISSUE OF THE DIRECTORY SECTION OF THE AMERICAN ART ANNUAL CONTAINING NAMES, ADDRESSES, AND BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES OF 5,459 PAINTERS, SCULPTORS AND ILLUSTRATORS

1921

Who's Who in Art

Publisher's Note

"Who's Who in Art" is the directory section of the "American Art Annual." As heretofore, the directory has been compiled chiefly from the membership lists of the leading art societies in the United States and exhibitors at same. Data blanks were sent out in the early spring and the information thus received, with that sent by the artists for previous volumes, has formed the basis of the biographical notes.

This volume contains 5,459 names and addresses of painters, sculptors and illustrators; the last issue of this directory, that in Volume XVI, 1919, contained 5,043 names. Twelve hundred and one (1,201) names appear here for the first time; these are new exhibitors who have been represented in the current exhibitions during the past two years. Seven hundred and eighty-five (785) names have been dropped because no answer has been received to our request for present address, the artist has not exhibited since 1919; is not a member of a recognized art society, or has died during the two-year period.

When two addresses are given and the second one is preceded by "h," it indicates that the first address is the studio, the second is the home. The artist's medium, whether painter, sculptor, illustrator, or craftsman, is indicated by letters at the beginning of the biographical note; when no biographical information was obtainable, the letters are used in parentheses after the address. The date after the abbreviation of a society of which an artist is a member, refers to the time of election.

The lists of "Work" under the names are limited to paintings in public galleries, monumental sculpture, and published illustrations.

The names of married women include the maiden name; they are preceded by "Mrs." or followed by the husband's name in parentheses. The maiden name is also entered in alphabetical order, with a cross reference. All names of women without title are "Miss."

Index

This index is arranged by cities and forms a cross reference to the main body of the book where reports are grouped by States. There are also cross references under the following heads: Aid for Artists, Architecture, Circulating Exhibitions, Open Exhibitions, Federations, Galleries, Graphic Arts, Handicrafts, Libraries, Municipal Art, National, School Arts, Schools of Art, Sculpture, and Western Societies. These headings are in italic caps.

Each society is entered under the city where the office of the secretary is located; under the name of the State or under National when the residence of the secretary changes from year to year. The name of the city is omitted from the title of the societies in the index, but the full official title (without the article) is used in the body of the book.

The special articles in volumes I to XVIII are listed in this index; these titles are in italics. Societies which were entered in Volumes I to X, but which have been discontinued or which, for one reason or another, are not in Volume XVIII, will be found in the index of Volume XI, with volume and page of the last entry.
